The most daring "Academy"

Learning from the past and advancing into the future without giving up anything. This is the premise that was used to develop the new SHERCO Academy, the goal being to make it the most competitive 125 motorcycle in the class. True to this approach, the SHERCO Academy is a motorcycle built for the toughest competitions in the cadet and junior category. With a complete new look that is modern and daring coupled with its high performance which is enhanced in the racing version, it is no doubt a machine with the highest performance in its class.

The SHERCO Academy model was first released in 2008, in order to provide the younger riders with a motorcycle suitable for use as they develop their skills in the demanding sport of modern trials. For 2009 the Academy family grows a little deeper with some tweaks which are more than cosmetic. A good example of the effort that SHERCO has gone to in order to provide the future champions with a suitable product is the inclusion of a racing version in this size class, a feature normally only reserved for larger displacement bikes.

The new SHERCO Academy is as bold as the young pilots who will very soon be riding them. The new graphics, based on a spectacular electric blue color, which follows the current trend in products targeted at the younger generation, are very bold and full of emotion. Without a doubt the standard Academy and the new Racing version will provide an outstanding motorcycle for those young riders who want to maximize their introduction into the world of trials.

The new SHERCO Academy has received some improvements in respect to its predecessor. Beyond the new look there is a redesign of the ignition mapping along with a more efficient electrical system. The racing version includes some additional features including several carbon fiber parts and a titanium exhaust header pipe. For the first time there is a motorcycle for the beginning rider that will allow them to compete at the highest level.
